

Peer Assessment – Danny Lint

Working with Alexis and Gursimranjit on the Smart Parking Finder project was a genuinely rewarding and enjoyable experience. Alexis really got the ball rolling by starting the project and setting the initial direction, which gave our team momentum and clarity from the very beginning. They consistently contributed thoughtful ideas, asked insightful questions that helped us refine our approach, and brought a great sense of humor that made collaboration engaging. Their initiative and ability to keep us focused ensured that the project stayed on track and that our work reflected both creativity and practicality.

Gursimranjit was equally dependable and detail-oriented, always ready to brainstorm creative solutions and provide constructive feedback that strengthened our work. They approached challenges with patience and thoughtfulness, making sure our decisions were well-considered and aligned with the ethical principles we wanted to highlight. Their reliability and collaborative spirit made them a great teammate, and their contributions added depth and polish to the final product.

What stood out most was how both teammates approached the project with care; not just about the technical aspects, but also about how our solution would be perceived by users and the importance of ethical design. Their willingness to listen, adapt, and support each other made the team dynamic feel balanced, thoughtful, and fun. Together, they helped ensure our final product was well-rounded, ethically grounded, and clearly presented. I appreciated their teamwork and would be happy to collaborate with them again in the future.
